Deliverable One Contribution Doc

On the day that class was canceled, the group met up in order to work on deliverable 1. Judy was not present at the meeting. Navado, Yi-Hsuan, and I each came up with one problem for the scope. Specifically, I posed the question "Does age correlate to whether users prefer mobile vs web experience?" because I had the hypothesis that younger users probably gravitate towards the mobile platform as opposed to desktop. I also wrote the problem definition for that question as well– why we chose this question and what goals it would achieve. Navado and I wrote the overview together. I think Judy also wrote some later, which I edited for grammar, flow, etc. I created the link to the data set as well as a Google drive folder for all relevant documents, which I shared with the group members. In terms of the vendor contact info, I put in Connor's info since he provided the data set. It seems like the only way to contact Facebook is through their page. They do not have a "contact us" page and when I look it up on Google, the only info that comes up is for corporate headquarters, not any form of customer service or support team.

As of right now (2/16 7:35 PM), Judy and Navado have been largely MIA. I asked everyone to look at the requirement document yesterday to discuss what we still have to do, but it seems like only Navado and Yi-Hsuan have looked at the document while only Yi-Hsuan is participating. I had also asked the group to look up the Facebook contact info and put it in the vendor contact section since the data source is Facebook. However, I ended up doing that too after seeing that no one did it. I worked on the second problem explanation while Yi-Hsuan worked on the third. At 8:05 PM, Judy answered the group chat saying that she can do it after 10 PM when the deliverable is due at 11:59 PM. Yi-Hsuan and I ended up working on the first problem definition together.
